VOL. XVII, No. 6. {SEVENTEENTH YEAR} GLOUCESTER, MASS., AUGUST 9, 1913. PRICE FIVE CENTS

East Gloucester

ONE-THIRD of August has gone and practically but twenty days remain wherein will be compressed the festivities which will bring an end to the season's activities. East Gloucester has upheld its old time reputation for being one of the banner resorts along the New England coast.

The history of the season of 1913 is practically made. In the late spring and early summer the indications were that it was to eclipse all its predecessors and that accomodations were to be taxed to the limit. Especially was this the case in cottage leases. Along the Cape Ann coast line nearly all the desirable cottages were taken six weeks before the season opened. It was the same relative to hotel bookings.

While the demand for cottages has continued and this branch fulfilled expectations, some of the hotels have not done the July business anticipated. Patronage with some dropped off an eighth to a quarter. In one instance however it increased beyond all previous house records.

The sudden falling off in hotel registrations after such a propitious opening is ascribed by the hotel men to the floods which prevailed in the middle west in the late spring, thereby materially changing the plans of many who had planned to come to the shore and mountain resorts of New England. People from that locality confirm this and the hotel men say that the cancellations and falling off can be very largely traced to the area in question.

Austin L. M. Johnson, Mrs. A. M. Johnson and Miss Elizabeth A. Johnson are a Plainfield, N. J. party who will remain during August at the Rockaway. The Messrs. Johnson are well known New York attorneys.

Frequent visitors to the Rockaway are Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Strauss and two daughters of Cambridge, and friends from New York who motored down the North Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Brock who were at the Rockaway earlier in the season have returned for August.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Wyckoff, Frank T. and Helen L. Wyckoff of Springfield were welcomed back to the Rockaway this week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Ashley and Misses Elsie T. and Marjorie L. and Raymond L. Ashley of New Bedford are new comers to the Rockaway and are registered for an August stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Wetmore and Mr. and Mrs. Bliss well known in Washington hotel circles who have made the Rockaway their home for a part of the season for some years are again at that hostelry for an August stay.

There are an unusually large number of young people at the Rockaway this season and there is "something doing" all the time. An enjoyable occasion was the straw ride Friday evening to Bass Rocks, and the route up the shore as far as Manchester. On their return all participated in a chafing dish party which lasted until midnight. The chaperone was Mrs. James T. Fulton of Chicago and among those of the party were: Misses Ellen and Grace Jenkins, the Misses Roelker, Misses Elsie A., Althea and Dorothy Johnson, Helen F. Wyckoff, Alfred Jenkins, Wesley Blank, the Messrs. Johnson, the Misses S. F. and S. L. O'Dea, Misses Dorothy and Margaret Blagg, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Storms. Miss Amy Wetherbee officiated at the chafing dish.

Some Early History.

CAPE Ann is historic and romantic ground. The old explorers and captains have sailed majestically by and touched upon its territory. Thorwald, the Viking, rounded into its harbor on his cruise to the New World and along the coast of Vineland. He named it Krossanes. "Here it is beautiful" the old sagas make him say "and here I would like to build my home." Going on shore he was attacked by the "skrellings," as the sagas termed the Indians, was fatally wounded by an arrow and died on board ship. Here he was buried in the night that the skrellings might not observe. This was in 1001, in the dim beginnings of modern history.

Strange to say, the Chevalier De Champlain,

The Rockport Shore

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that this is the first season in some years that the battleships have not spent a week or more here in mid-summer, this section of the shore is attracting as many guests as ever. All the hostelries along this shore are well filled to-night and the summer on the whole has been a fairly successful one with August promising full houses to Labor Day.

The new Hotel Edward at Pigeon Cove continues to attract a large number of luncheon and dinner parties from all along the North Shore and is making Pigeon cove an objective point much the same as the Colonial Arms attracted the well-to-do trippers to East Gloucester. Many have inspected the hotel are profuse in

Magnolia

THE weather during the week has been delightful, early September switched into Dog-day August — and things in this section have brightened up perceptibly with the coming of many new faces injecting added life and color into the situation.

I suppose some when they read this will comment that this writer is living in the past and sees the old days as the golden days, and nothing good in the new. However the old timers here shall be the judges. Magnolia is not what it was twenty-five years ago in life and gayety. Then during midsummer, the Second Corps of Cadets of Salem, the crack aristocratic organization of that place, made its annual encampment in the field, now partially covered, in the rear of the Library building. This was a gala week. Governor's day, when the governor and his staff in brave array came down to review the conquering hosts was a great day altogether. Everybody came to witness the spectacle. There were no automobiles in those days and the roadway from Gloucester, Salem, Ipswich and the back country generally was thronged with vehicles of all descriptions headed for Magnolia. One would think that an American Derby day had been established from the congestion of the highways. Ten to fifteen thousand people were attracted to Magnolia on this occasion.

Then again the spirit of the colony was livelier especially among the younger element. William E. Russell, afterwards governor, spent his summers here and as a young man organized a Magnolia ball team which was one of the best in the locality and games were arranged with other high class teams and played on the Magnolia field attracting large numbers and uncorking much enthusiasm. Then the Davis boys from St. Louis put Magnolia on the tennis map for years. I suppose, however, that the swimming pool compensates for these past activities. Governor Russell, as he afterwards became, passed on too early, many of us think, for the good of his party and country. He was the prince of good fellows and we shall not see his like again, I fear, within the party fold for years.

Speaking of Governor Russell: His residence was on Lexington avenue. While walking down that thoroughfare recently I was impressed by the great change that has come over that locality. Once a residence street it is now converted into a veritable rag fair. "Cheapside" I mentally exclaim as the vista of tawdry tinselled and gaudy shops come into view.

The North Shore Swimming Pool continues a center of interest and is thronged daily. Tea, dancing is announced every Saturday afternoon during the season.

The club house can be engaged after 7 P. M. for evening bridge or dancing. For open dates and terms apply to the house committee. Two card rooms may also be reserved during the day for bridge parties.

The bulletin for the rest of the month contains these announcements:

Thursday, August 14th. Auction bridge party for members, subscribers and guests. Tables two dollars, single tickets fifty cents, which must be procured in advance of Mrs. F. S. Chick, P. O. Box 54, Magnolia. Bridge, 3 o'clock sharp; tea, 5 o'clock.

Friday, August 15th. Open air concert by

TO ADVERTISERS

The CAPE ANN SHORE, now in its seventeenth consecutive season, is the only summer resort publication on Cape Ann. It reaches every section of the cape, and is the only means of communication of the kind between the merchants and the summer residents. Therefore its value as an advertising medium is self-evident. It contains each week a full and complete account of the social happenings of the summer resort section. It occupies a place by itself in the advertising field, reaching the most profitable customers along the North Shore. Advertisers should remember these facts.

Swimming Pool vs. Crescent Beach.

The SHORE has received the following communication regarding its observations recently in reference to the swimming pool at Magnolia:

Magnolia, July 30, 1913.

To the Editor of the Cape Ann SHORE:

"Come on down, Mr. Editor, and see our specimens of 'low vitality and children' that sport in our Pool. They are the huskiest anaemics on the North Shore, and unless all signs fail, the children that will sail boats in our Pool are as yet unborn.

Your observations in general on Swimming Pools are not warranted by the facts at Magnolia. Whether it is because humans are part fish and inclined to go in shoals, or that the whole world loves an audience, truth is that with the temperature practically the same in Ocean and Pool, and that temperature between 65 and 70 in both cases, (sic? — the editor) the pool is preferred and used by three out of four bathers.

It is not "a matter of doubt whether the pool will ever be popular". It is popular. This was proved by the fact that it was opened on June 21st and on its first monthly birthday, July 21st, it was necessary to establish a waiting list as all our facilities were taxed to their limit and we had a membership rising 350.

There are elements of sociability and competition brought into play, in diving from the spring board and pool bathing, that are lost in the broad expanse of ocean. A pool is a source of enjoyment to the bather, of pleasure to the onlooker, and decidedly adds to the Gaiety of Nations.

FRANK S. CHICK, Secretary,
North Shore Swimming Pool.

That the club house recently erected on the upland of Crescent beach at Magnolia is popular and will continue to be popular The SHORE has no reason to doubt. Such institutions are popular elsewhere and contribute materially to the life of the colonies in which they are located, constituting social clearing houses for the gossip of the colony and a rallying and focusing center in general.

The Bass Rocks club, that at Eastern point, the Squam yacht club house, the Essex county club house and others all fulfill this function admirably and are indispensible adjuncts to their respective localities. That Magnolia has not had one of these institutions before is due to the peculiar conditions which made the Oceanside, so to speak, a club house for the women of its summer colony. That this new club house was needed for the independent cottagers and the Magnolia hinterland is apparent. Its success was assured from the start.

The sole question at issue is whether a bathing pool some 25 or more feet wide by 35 feet long and from four to seven feet deep is more desirable than a splendid stretch of white strand, free from sewage and other objectional material, affording such excellent facilities for sea bathing, as Crescent beach at Magnolia.

Really we must decline to debate such a proposition. If there are those who prefer the restricted pool to the open ocean and beach we shall have no quarrel with them. There is no accounting for tastes.

As to the pleasure "and elements of sociability and competition in diving from the spring board in pool bathing, lost in the broad expanse of ocean" we must say that we are yet unconvinced. There was once a spring board at Crescent beach and if Mr. Chick "will come on down to" say the Hawthorne Inn at East Gloucester, where one of these spring boards is maintained right in a cove, an integral part of the ocean, we believe he will find that the "elements of pleasure and sociability etc." are still retained to a marked degree.

However if the Magnolia innovation succeeds and Crescent beach is deserted by the bathers for the swimming pool, we shall expect to see life at the famous bathing beaches of the world revolutionized and pools built to conform to the Magnolia idea. The beaches of the old world, Brighton, the most famous in the world, where royalty for more than a century has taken its dip in the briny, Torquay, Ostend, Boulogne, Scheviningen and other renowned Europeon watering centers, with Atlantic city, Naragansett pier, Bailey's beach at Newport, Singing beach Manchester, Old Orchard, not to mention Coney Island and Revere beaches, contiguous to the great cities in this country will all be deserted for the swimming pool. Perhaps.

Ravenswood Water

Pure water is something concerning which many people are wisely particular exercising as it does such a marked influence on the health. For that reason many prefer that their drinking water be taken from an approved spring. Such an establishment we have right here in Gloucester. M. L. Wetherell some years ago acquired title to one of the finest living springs on the cape in the Ravenswood forest far away from any habitation and has taken measures to preserve and accentuate its purity. For the past fifteen years it has been bottled under the most approved conditions and is now used lagely as a beverage by many people on the cape. It outranks in its freshness all others being bottled close at hand. An analysis by State assayers has shown it to be of unrivalled purity. The distributing depot is the Wetherell Pharmacy in Post Office square.

Long Beach

For the third time within five years fire, during the winter, made a vacancy in the line of cottages along the beach. Fortunately a shift in the wind prevented almost a complete sweep of the entire cottage settlement. While these visitations are disastrous yet they have been instrumental in adding to the appearance of Cottage row inasmuch as a much better and pleasing type of structure has replaced the burned edifices. Usually the cottages have been rebuilt at once but this season owing to high price of labor and materials none of the owners have taken such action. This fall it is understood all plan to replace their cottages of an improved type.

The great drawback here has been a lack of water both for fire and domestic service. At the March town meeting Rockport voted to extend its water service to the locality and it was expected that the mains would be laid and the water services installed at the begining of the season but for some reason action has been delayed the debate being whether a surface pipe or deep laid mains should be constructed. It is understood that the verdict, wisely it seems, is in favor of the latter, thus ensuring fire and domestic service at all times.

It is said that a new hotel is projected near the street railway casino on the Gloucester side, plans and specifications having been drawn. The proposed new structure is elaborately drawn up and if it gets into building material will be an addition to the accomodations of this locality. The beach with the scenery of sea and woodland is certainly a drawing card hard to beat.

J. Thomas King of Gloucester has just completed on Starknaught Heights one of the most pretentious residences in this locality. It occupies a sightly location and its architecture of a Colonial mission type is most pleasing and out of the ordinary. The house would attract attention anywhere for its many individual features. It is of two and a half stories and the sloping ground to the basement floor is utilized for a garage. The exterior is a pleasing stucco yellow tinted. The residence embodies Mr. King's ideas of what he thinks desirable in a residence of this character. The fittings inside are complete and substantial and not of the ordinary cottage character. Everything to be found in a modern city residence is here. This house must have an influence in building up this section for the location is certainly most desirable.

Squam Willows and the Old Tide Mill Colony.

This section of the river including the Rocky shore is as much in favor as ever and is in one of the most beautiful locations on Cape Ann.

Here in Vine street, right off the cathedral-arched willows, is the oldest house on the cape, now occupied as a summer residence, the home of Mrs. Caroline M. Brown, a direct descendant of Thomas Riggs, the second town clerk, who built the house in 1664. He was also the first shorthand writer in America and specimens of his work taken in this country are extant.

The far-famed Willows for which this spot is noted were planted by two brothers named Chard, stage drivers of seventy-five years ago who drove to Salem. The place now occupied by the willows was a bog. On the road to Salem was a clump of willows, so cutting some slips they brought them here and set them out the result being these noble shade trees which never fail to elicit the favorable commendation of passersby.

perhaps the most renowned explorer since Columbus and John and Sebastian Cabot in the New World, had a nearly similar experience just 600 years later. Coming down the coast of what is now New England he anchored in Gloucester harbor and drew a map which he published, calling the place Le Beauport — the beautiful harbor.

Champlain had traversed the coast line of two continents, was familiar with every nook and corner of the coast from Labrador to Cape Cod and yet bestowed the signal honor of "Le Beauport" on what is now Gloucester harbor. He had skirted the coast two years previously, in 1604, and named the cape, Cape Aux Isles. He, too, came ashore and narrowly escaped the fate of Thorwald. Perhaps six centuries of legend had come down among the "skrellings" of how in the remote past the pale faces with white winged canoes had come to their home, had been attacked and their big chief killed. So, animated by the traditions of former exploits, they attacked the invaders. But, fortunately, the Sieur De Poutrincourt, with a squad of arquebusiers appeared and saved Champlain and his escort from Thorwald's fate.

Time passes and then sails down the coast that picturesque individual whose fame history half-hides under the unromantic name of John Smith—the hero—let him tell it—of countless heroic exploits in two hemispheres. Smith, it appears, according to his autobiography, cut a lot of ice among the women. He was challenged, so he says, to mortal combat by three Saracens, and successfully worsted them in mortal combat and cut off their heads. Then he won the heart of the fairest houri in all the east—Charitzka Tragibigzanda—the name flows like a rippling river of sunlight—who released him in the night from a dungeon where he was held prisoner. So when the bold Smith sailed down the New England coast he saw no fairer spot to immortalize his exploits than this fair headland. Accordingly he named the Cape Tragibigzanda after his liberator. The three islands, Thacher's, Milk and Salt island, he named the three Turks' heads. Strange, that in this far off clime the memory of his military and love conquests should be perpetuated. Although changed later to Cape Ann, in honor of Princess Anne of Denmark, mother of King James of England, Tragabigzanda still persists as a name of the Cape. Later Smith sailed down the coast of Virginia where he continued his heart breaking conquests, as witness the Pocahontas stunt, a slight variant of that of Tragabigzanda. Smith linked his name immortally with Tragabigzanda and Pocahontas and comes down the ages with a romance and a courage which exalts his fame.

In 1623, however, the first settlement was made on Cape Ann. In the little town of Dorchester, in Dorset, England, there was a Puritan pastor of St. Peter's church—a low churchman today—who had the vision of Cecil Rhodes or Lord Clive, or those other Englishmen who have planned to annex the world to the tight little isle. Rev. Mr. White was an enthusiast on colonization. So he interested the gentry of Dorset and they formed a company called the Dorchester company which they financed and dispatched to the New England coast for the purpose of rooting deep in the soil of New England the life and traditions of Old England. The expedition comprised the yoemanry of the west country, well fitted and dispatched in three ships of the period. They landed at Cape Ann, set up a house, the frame of which was brought with them, and commenced their fishing operations here on Stage head, or Fishermen's field, as it was first called. Here for three years they pursued the fisheries with success and sent their catch, salted, to Bilboa, Spain, the origin of New England's foreign commerce. But owing to some internal dissensions and the ground not being suitable for farming, the agriculturists in the colony went up the coast further to Salem, leaving a number of the fishermen behind to fight out the battle. This they and their descendants and others have been doing ever since.

In 1625 the place was headquarters for the New England fisheries. There were three companies of fishermen who made the Stage head their land base, the Dorchester colony, that of an independent set of adventurers under Captain John Hewes and a company from Plymouth under Capt. Myles Standish. The latter claimed all the land and ordered Hewes and his crowd to get off, but they refused and barricaded themselves on the bluff and bade defiance to Standish and his crew. Things looked squally for a time until Roger Conant, who had been chosen head of the colonists a year after they came over, smoothed matters by proposing that all pursue the fisheries in peace. "There was room enough for all," said Conant, and so the trouble was averted. Conant did not come over with the Dorchester colony, but hearing that fishing was "set forward at Cape Anne," joined later. They have recently set up a monument to his memory in Salem.

Several years ago a tablet was placed in honor of this landing and set on the face of the outcropping ledge, which furnishes a natural framework for such an inscription.

It is one of these craft or ships of the period that the local artist, Alex G. Tupper, has depicted at Half-Moon Beach, one of the beauty spots of the locality.

In 1855, J. Wingate Thornton, Esq., published an exhaustive account of the "Landing at Cape Ann," with an accompanying map, which was the first historical work concerning Cape Ann's history published. It left no ground uncovered and furnished material for future historians. In this connection, Mr. Thornton did the Cape an invaluable historical service. His descendants, Mrs. C. C. G. Thornton and Mrs. J. Wingate Thornton, have been for many years summer residents at Magnolia.

The frontispiece represents the ship "Charity" one of the Dorchester Company's fleet of three sent over to colonize this part of the country. The artist is Alex G. Tupper who has a studio at East Gloucester. His painting of the locality is excellently done and he has added a correct representation of a ship of the period in the act of anchoring, the ship's crew setting off immediately for the shore. It forms an effective historical representation. Mr. Tupper has also painted his conception of the "Wreck of the Hesperus," an effective composition which a St. Louis connoiseur has purchased.
